

EXPERIENTIAL LEARNING

Education is evolving and traditional techniques are being replaced by more unconventional and engaging processes.

We believe that experiential learning is the best way to communicate ideas and information. People often remember experiences because of how it made them feel, leaving them with a lasting memory and reinforcing the knowledge gained. We specialise in curating moments like this, creating memories that last.

Our approach educates, provokes and inspires audiences, tailoring games and activities that reach impact goals or the educational outcomes you desire. You can hire us to either curate and deliver or curate and train your team to roll out the programme.

THE ISLAND

'The Island' is a set of interactive, activity-based games where children aged 4-11 explore the solutions to society's most pressing issues and ethical dilemmas.

With play at its core, the aim of the project is to develop the skills, values and attitudes of children that will equip and incline them to be socially-responsible citizens later on in life.

For 7 years we worked with 16-24 year olds who, time and again, demonstrated they harbour the same misconceptions, lacking similar skills in communication and critical thinking.

We identified a need to address these issues at the earliest opportunity and piloted this project as a way of tackling the root causes of poor community engagement at a young age.

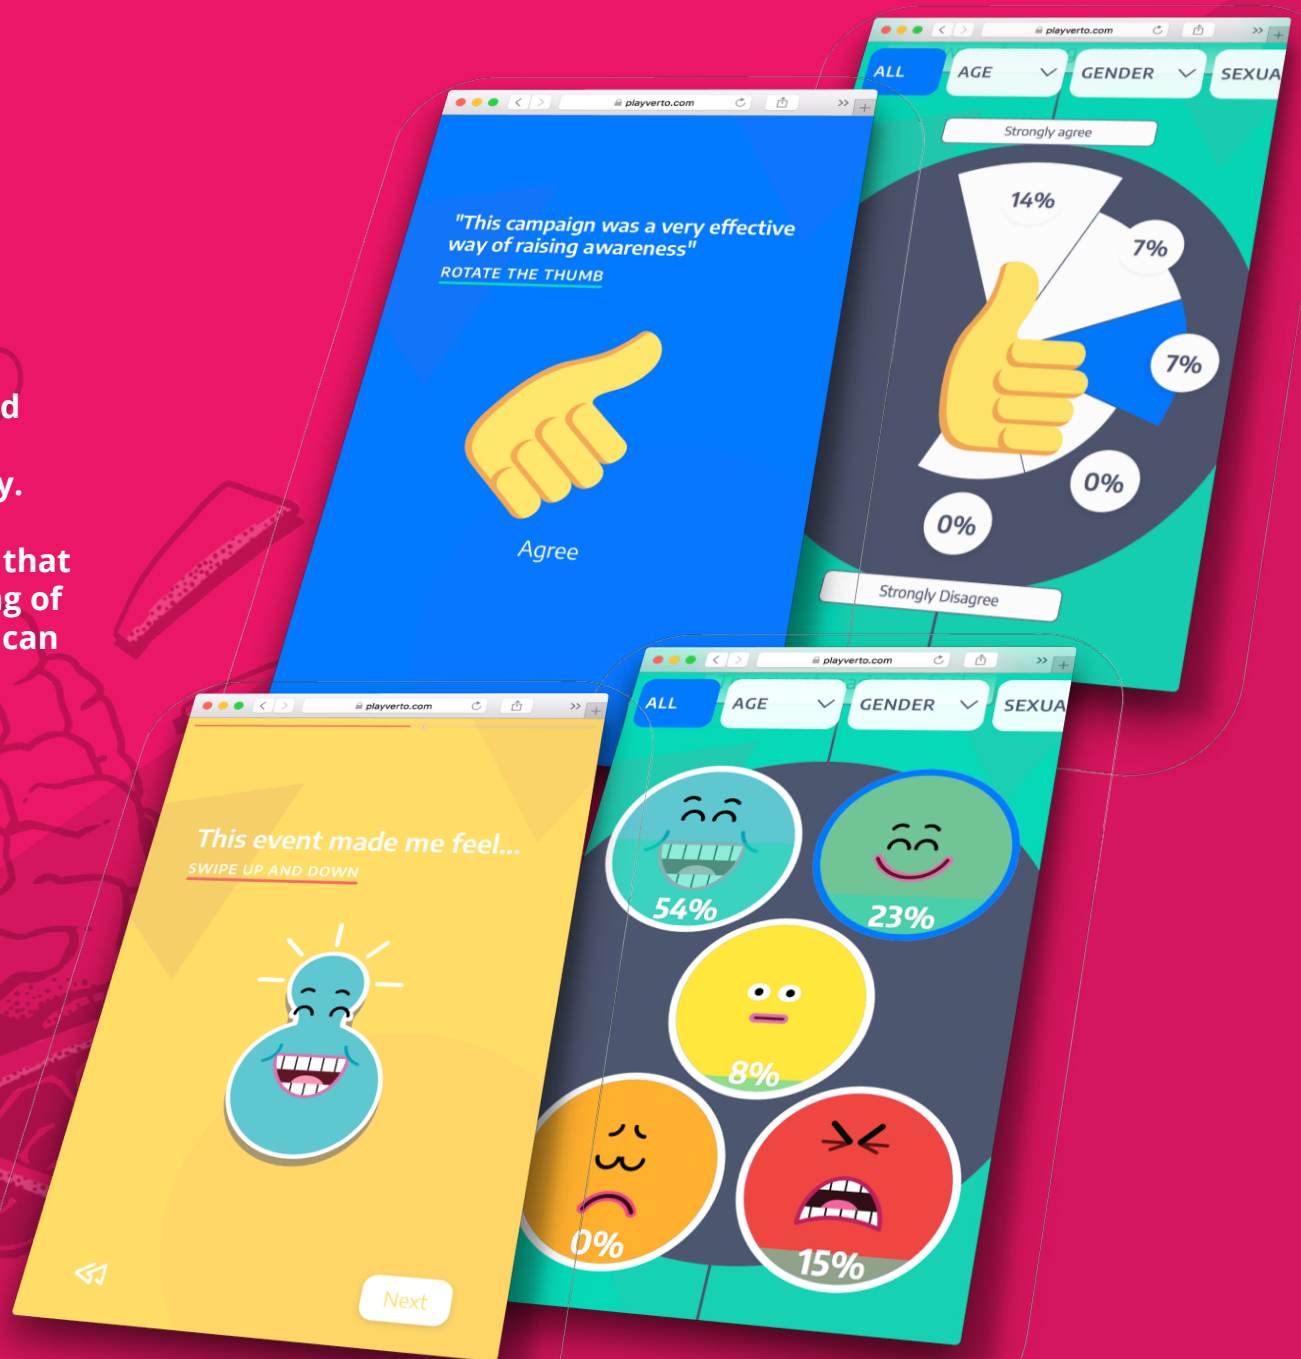

This project will be an early years research study like no other and has received interest from Lego, Sesame Street, Microsoft and the PEDAL unit at Cambridge University.

In order to measure your impact and attribution we will bookend your event/workshop with a Verto survey.

Verto is a gamified survey platform that can be used to support the gathering of meaningful insight and data so you can share with your key stakeholders.
